

Open meeting today

by Linda Farthing

The proposed new constitution of the Students' Society and its amendments will be discussed today at an open meeting of the Students' Society in the Union Ballroom at 1 pm.

The new constitution is proposed to replace the present one which was ratified in February 1965. The present constitution provides for a certain number of students to be elected from each faculty, whereas the proposed constitution gives one representative for each 1400 students which makes the representation more fair for the larger faculties.

Sub-amendment proposals include a recommendation for one representative for every 1000 students and the incorporation of the very small faculties (Divinity, Graduate Nurses, and Music) into larger faculties for elections. This would ensure that Council would not become unworkably large and that proper representation could be achieved.

The new constitution also ensures that Students' Council meets regularly and that meetings can be closed, but reasons must be provided. A reserve fund of Council is provided for legal aid to students.

A judicial board is to be established to solve problems such as the present difficulty with the Student Senators. The board is to be comprised of seven law students in their final year of the B.C.L. degree. Since the judicial board decisions are final, a sub-amendment has been proposed to provide a board of appeal.

An impeachment clause which can be used against any member of Students' Council is also proposed. The terms necessary for impeachment make it a far more difficult procedure than in the constitution proposed in 1968-69.

The open meeting of the Students' Society needs at least 300 students at its open meeting. If this is achieved the constitution will be voted on by the students on December 2 requiring 2/3 majority with 20% voting. The entire constitution is subject to ratification by Senate before implementation. All students are encouraged to read the proposal and to come to the open meeting and express their views.

Archer's challenge

Dear Students:

I am totally convinced now that the mandate I was given when I was elected President of the Students' Society was a mandate to do what I like, whether it is in the best interest of the student body or whether it abuses to the worst degree their fundamental rights.

Specifically, there is no provision for impeachment in the Constitution under which we are operating, nor is there any kind of judicial body which could prevent me from assuming dictatorial powers. With regard to the case presently being considered by the Judicial Committee, I really feel no obligation to abide by their decision in the absence of the slightest indication on the part of the students at large that they think it performs a good and necessary function. The new Constitution does provide for a Judicial Board and for impeachment. Students have the opportunity to turn out today at the open meeting in the Ballroom at 1:00 p.m. and vote to send this constitution to a referendum. I issue a personal challenge to students at large to do this. If they don't, I can only interpret it as an indication that they are giving me CARTE BLANCHE. There is no way they can unseat me if they don't pass the new constitution.

There are a great deal of significant and potentially frightening proposals in the proposed constitution and the subamendments.

We are raising fees about $4 per student, for instance. This hits right at the pocket. Who cares?

Faculty consolidation is suggested. No reaction.

Bachelor of Nursing candidates can never run for Council. Who complains?

Bachelor of Social Work students aren't even considered. So what?

All this with no checks and balances to the supreme power of Council. In a way, it would be quite flattering if students refused to turn out in order to rectify these situations, but it makes the prospect for the future quite horrendous.

Good thing I'm leaving.

Hutton Archer
President
Students' Society.

Cliche finds support

by Arnold Bennett

Support is mounting in the rank-and-file of le Front d'Action Politique for President Paul Cliche, whose resignation was demanded last week by a 15 to 5 vote of FRAP's Conseil Permanent.

Cliche himself, however, told the Daily that he will resign the Presidency at the beginning of the general congress of FRAP in January, 1971. Until then he will remain in office.

Several Comités d'Action Politique including St. Louis, have been circulating petitions since Friday that Cliche not resign, stating that the motion to sack him was not popular in nature. Cliche's supporters intend to gain support and to apply pressure on the FRAP executive at the congress.

There are presently about 700 members in FRAP. If 200 signatures can be obtained within the next two weeks, said Robert Keaton, an organizer in CAP St. Louis, "this will be a good indication of support."

Spokesmen for the Conseil Permanent of FRAP claim that Cliche's resignation was demanded for what they term "constitutional" reasons. They have charged him with "arrogance" and violation of FRAP's constitution for making public unauthorised statements unequivocally condemning terrorism.

The belief of Keaton and other FRAP members, however, is that members of the Conseil Permanent wanted to maintain a "neutral position" regarding terrorism, and decided to get rid of Cliche for what he said rather than for how he said it.

Pakistan aid cttee plans blitz

by Steve Lyons

This Friday will be East Pakistan Day at McGill.

The blitz to be held on Friday, will be the primary subject discussed at the press conference for the East Pakistan Relief Fund Committee, today.

The fund committee wants to recruit 1,500 to 2,000 volunteers from the student body for this blitz. Up to this point the reaction is far more enthusiastic from the general public in and around Montreal, than the McGill community.

Moving into its second week of operations, with the base at the University Centre, the committee has obtained permission from several municipalities in the Montreal area to organise campaigns in their districts. As well, several satellite sub-committees have been set up to handle these local campaigns.

Sometime within the next two weeks, an Indian and Pakistani cultural show will be held in the Union Ballroom, with all proceeds going to the fund. Indian and Pakistani dancers, musicians, and singers will provide the entertainment, as the emphasis of the show will be the cultural aspect of these arts.

Dissension in Ed. faculty

by Toby Abramovitz

Members of the Faculty of Education met last Friday night to discuss their dissatisfaction with their faculty, especially the 1G program, a one year post-graduate course leading to the interim Class One teaching diploma.

The 100 students at the meeting criticized the basic orientation of the faculty as a whole as well as the structure and curriculum of the present school system.

"We feel that our starting point for change must be here; but we hope it will be possible to affect the school system, not only by our own teaching methods, but also by pressuring for change through the union structure", explained one of the students.

An ad-hoc committee for revision of the 1G program formalized several proposals calling for:

- optional attendance and no grading for courses considered irrelevant by the committee. These include History and Philosophy of Education.

- open meetings for methods courses to discuss problems and suggest improvements.

- a seminar on student teaching to determine what would be the most valuable experience for student teachers, regular teachers; and a more intensive student teaching program would then be instituted.

- student-initiated and student-run seminars organized in time blocks of hours, weeks etc., as is felt necessary.

The committee hopes to establish spontaneous seminars that could be arranged any time by any student on a particular topic of discussion, and on-going seminars that would deal with important issues that could continue during the term. Some topics suggested for the on-going seminars include Learning Disabilities, Assignments, Evaluation, Discipline and Learning Environments.

The Ad Hoc Committee hopes to implement several proposals immediately.

Radical rabbi hits US Jews

Bruce Goldman, Rabbi of the Radical Jewish Union and Jewish Chaplain at Columbia University, last night scathingly attacked American Jewish community institutions in a Hillel-sponsored meeting in the Leacock Building.

"I have committed myself," he declared, "to the building of, for want of a better term, a national Jewish liberation movement. Over the last few years I have come to the conclusion that Jewish community life is not Jewish, but American, and that this has caused the hostility and alienation of Jewish students from what they think is Judaism."

"There is a sense in the Jewish community that any discussion of Israel in critical terms or any discussion of the Arab refugee problem and Palestinian organizations is taboo," the bearded, long-haired rabbi asserted. "Anything that deviates from the monolithic line is labelled as self-hating, or antisemitic, or a reaction against parents."

He lashed out against Jews who "use antisemitism as a form of fund-raising, without which their organizations would go out of business. If it weren't for the fact that the Anti-Defamation League finds anti-semites under every rock, the Jewish community would have no raison d'être."

"Assimilated Jews," Goldman charged, "are allied with the WASP ruling class."

He cited the case of New York's Temple Emmanuel, which has many establishment figures with "vested interests in the Viet Nam War" as members, and which refused to let Jews speak out against the war on the grounds that it was against policy to let laymen speak from the pulpit. Goldman and several others were arrested in a demonstration there.

He commented bitterly that the synagogue was once a "forum for dissent," and that someone with a grievance against a member had once, by custom, been permitted to interrupt the service during even the most sacred parts.

Young Jews who went to the New York office of the Organization of Jewish Philanthropies to demand that its priorities be reordered in order to increase the funds granted for Jewish education were arrested.

Goldman charged that Jewish institutions refuse to involve themselves with Jews who happen to be homosexuals or drug addicts or who need aid after an abortion. This would be an admission, he interpreted, that some Jews are this way, "and everyone knows that Jewish women don't screw until they're married."

He continually blasted the United States, which he summed up as "a police state with institutionalized fascism. There are 9-million names of those who at any time disagreed with the policies of the American government on computer tapes, and these people would be thrown into detention camps during a declared state of national emergency."

Distinguishing between Jewish radicals and radical Jews he stated that the former are just "radicals who happen to be

by Arnold Bennett

Jews, who do not want to discover their own Jewish roots, and who do not recognize their own radicalism as having been born of Jewish concepts of social justice and ethics. They aim for an idealistic socialist state where everyone will be alike."

Radical Jews, on the other hand, according to Goldman, "see ethnic identity in broader terms. The real revolution comes when people are ready to accept and affirm differences between peoples."

That which is most radical about his group, the Radical Jewish Union, is that "they want to live their lives as they feel they should, and not as they are told to, and outside of organizations that they are told to belong to, such as the American Jewish Committee, Bnai Brith, and all that shit."

"They also believe in telling it like it is," he added. "Honesty is also radical today."

Goldman advocated that one should involve oneself in changing society rather than opt out of it. "Becoming a hippie is not a Jewish approach. Politics is religious."

He commented that the best way to lose one's religion is to involve oneself in religious institutions.

Although he several times declared himself to be "pro-Israel," he criticized Israeli policies towards the Arabs. "The most blatant ethical and political blunder was that Jews and Israelis did not years ago provide reparations for the Palestinians."

"Radical Zionists," he recommended, "should align themselves with progressive forces among the Arabs, but not those who aim at the destruction of Israel."

Goldman believes that all governments are "basically evil," and fears that Israel, as a "state of Jews rather than a Jewish state," may end up in the same rut.

All black jury for Seale trial?

NEW HAVEN, CONN. (CUI) — Defense lawyers for imprisoned Black Panther chairman Bobby Seale said yesterday they want an all-black jury when Seale, 34, begins trial for the alleged slaying of Alex Rackley, a former member of the New York Black Panthers.

Seale's defense charged that the virtually all white and middle-aged jurors are not Seale's peers.

Forty-six of 500 prospective jurors appeared yesterday in the Connecticut Superior Court, where Seale will begin a trial he has been awaiting for nearly eight months with codefendant Ericka Huggins.

Eight of the jurors were dismissed immediately, most on the grounds of knowing the state prosecuting attorney or members of his staff.

Seale was charged after Rackley was found dead in May 1969.

Permanent from discussing the issue with the CAP membership.

"The executive," accused Keaton, "is skirting the issue and trying to sweep it under the rug."

Referring to the petitions, Cliche expressed his confidence that the membership will support his principles and take an unequivocal stand against terrorism at the congress. Someone else, however, will have to come forward to lead this bloc of opinion, he said, since he still intends to resign.

"I have come to the end of the road," he stated, explaining his decision. "I have worked hard and I have done my part. I have been President for a long time."

Aside from the issue of Cliche's resignation, many CAPs are trying to establish priorities for action for the winter. One (Continued on page 5)

Biologist on blacklist

LONDON (CUP) — A Detroit geographer who believes the world faces a biological crisis rather than a political one has been blacklisted by the US Congress.

William Bunge, a visiting professor at the University of Western Ontario, was placed on the Internal Security Committee list of 64 members of participants in the activities of communist, militant, radical, extremist, or revolutionary groups.

The list was published last week under congressional immunity despite protest by the American Civil Liberties Union and a court order forbidding its publication.

Bunge said Sunday that he was delighted by the announcement, "It's the most prestigious list I've ever been on."

Bunge was hopeful that the publicity would help to make some of his views more widely known. Bunge, who feels that many social problems which appear to be political in nature are really biological, describes capitalism as the worship of machines. He said that we must alter people's behavior and this means changing their minds. Then their actions can change, he said.

Others included on the congressional blacklist are Dick Gregory, Dr. Benjamin Spock, Yippies Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, and Black Panther Bobby Seale.

idea, brought up in CAP St. Louis and which may be taken up by other CAPs and by FRAP as a whole, is that of concentrating on the labour scene because of the high level of unemployment.

FRAP could seek alliance with other labour-oriented groups and provide direct help to the unemployed. At the same time it could attempt to build a consciousness among this group of the causes of their condition.

Princes and power-brokers at FRAP

Predicting the future of FRAP seems to have been the most popular pastime for journalists in the weeks since the Oct. 25 elections.

In the deluge of words, the basic issues have been highly distorted, most noticeably in the long obscure article by Robert Keaton entitled FRAP - Crisis in Authenticity, published Thursday in the Daily.

We see things differently and we want to offer McGill readers another interpretation of the events.

FRAP is a democratic mass-based municipal party. Its commitment to democracy was established in the August 1970 Congress, and reaffirmed on Oct. 10, when it condemned at the same time FLQ terrorism on the grounds that terrorism and organization for political power are mutually exclusive means of operation. At the same time it accepted the analysis of the crisis in Quebec society put forth in the FLQ manifesto. This analysis, it may be noted, is similar to that offered by the PQ and a number of union centrals in the course of this last year.

That FRAP should refuse to affirm once again, after the elections, its already unambiguous stand on terrorism, indicates not neutrality nor intellectual fraud, but an unwillingness to allow President Cliche to manipulate an emotion-packed issue to oust from the organization his opponents on more basic issues.

For FRAP the issue of terrorism is a red-herring, manufactured, packaged and sold by Cliche et al in an attempt to force those who do not agree with him on the basic questions of internal democracy and control by the membership. There is no evidence to support Cliche's contention that either the membership or the public demanded a new statement from FRAP on terrorism after the elections. Instead there is ample evidence that immediately after Oct. 25 Cliche moved to consolidate the power of the union-based elements in the party at the expense of the community groups and citizens' committees.

This long simmering feud has structural roots traceable to the origins of FRAP. As a hybrid organization, FRAP brings together citizens' committees (based on geographical neighborhood structure), city-wide protest movements (such as Movement de Liberation du Taxi), popular health clinics (also neighborhood based) and a number of trade union professionals committed to political action. The citizens groups became the nub of the various CAPs. Structurally the trade unionists did not have any vehicle of their own: their role was limited to action as individuals within the CAPs.

Trade unions and community groups have traditionally had different ideas about how to mobilize for power. FRAP's experience has been that the unionists have neither integrated smoothly into the CAPs nor created their own vehicle to make themselves heard. As a result they have relied increasingly on their influence outside FRAP, in the unions from whom a great deal of FRAP's financial support comes, to pressure policy within FRAP.

FRAP's process of decision making between congresses is instructive on this point. There exists the Secretariat Permanent, a five member board in charge of finance, publicity, organization and research with one member at large. While empowered to make a considerable range of administrative and crisis decisions, the Secretariat is subordinate to the Conseil Permanent, a larger body consisting of the president and vice-president of FRAP, the president and vice-president of each CAP and other affiliated groups, and is empowered to make all decisions for FRAP between congresses. It was the Conseil Permanent that voted overwhelmingly for Cliche's resignation. Each team of CAP delegates votes by mandate from its CAP and must go before a general meeting of the CAP at least once a month to recount the decisions of the Conseil Permanent and account for the positions it has taken. Thus the Conseil Permanent is an essentially democratic and responsible body. It is far more responsive both theoretically and actually than a president elected for a year term and not answerable to any general membership assembly within that year. It is interesting to note that during the "terrorism" issue and the Cliche resignation relatively few CAPs have suffered severe internal dissension.

In this light it is appropriate to conclude that the body that has asked for Cliche's resignation represents the membership. It is also appropriate to assume that the Conseil Permanent demand for an unusual mid-year congress, which Cliche initially opposed, represents its acknowledgement that there are basic differences of opinion as to what FRAP's immediate and long range goals and philosophy should be, and represents as well a desire to bring these questions into open debate among the membership. Far from being anti-democratic, this difficult stormy course chosen is the most responsible one conceivable. This is a far cry from the power brokerage practiced by FRAP's president.

So we come to the question of where FRAP is today. Its governing and representative body, the Conseil Permanent, has chosen not to enter the trap Cliche has set for it: either pronounce against terrorism again or be branded terrorist. This rule or ruin play is cynical in the extreme. Why, one might ask, has FRAP's central body not pronounced against terrorism?

1. — Because its stand has been expressed and expressed again.

2. — Because the Conseil Permanent is taking no public stand on any issue of importance until the congress meets in January to thrash out the basic questions the election experience has raised.

Thus we have the spectacle before us of a painfully democratic organization held the hostage of its own responsiveness by a faction not terribly concerned with what its membership thinks. If FRAP is to continue to exist, it must rid itself of its power-brokers and princes.

Incredibly inhuman...

The Quebec medicare scheme is beginning to reveal a serious and lethal flaw — its disregard of the citizens' needs for low-cost drugs. It's ludicrous to give a low-income patient inexpensive medical diagnosis and then stick him with a $25 prescription which he can't afford. The medicare scheme, however, is not the major culprit, rather it is the incredibly inhuman actions of the Quebec College of Pharmacists and their allies in the government.

The need for low-cost drugs is literally a life and death matter. No amount of long-range legislation, studies or commissions will do anything for those dying or suffering sustained illnesses who cannot buy today's ridiculously priced drugs (or reasonably priced ones either.) Those on welfare can get money from the government to have prescriptions filled, but the process is bureaucratically complex and takes days — while the patient may be suffering or dying. Those not on welfare can't even go to the government.

In the past hospitals were able to operate clinics which could provide inexpensive — or even free — drugs to the poor. With medicare hospitals can no longer afford these clinics as easily as before.

To make matters worse, the government, under pressure from the College of Pharmacists, has not only failed to include pharmaceuticals under its present scheme, but has also refused to give hospitals the funds they need in order to continue dispensing medicine to the poor. For what reason? So that pharmacists, who don't allow anyone else to sell drugs, must figure that people will then be forced to come to them. This is not only crass but ironic: the poor can't afford drugs anyway so they'll just do without. A group of citizens and social workers have set up a Task Force for Low-Cost Medication group, asking the government to set up its own clinics to serve the needs of the poor. The response they have met has been anything but gratifying.

Joey Treiger

The Task Force is holding a public meeting to explain the situation and to debate with government and pharmacist representatives: tonight at 7:30 p.m., in Eglise St. Jacques, 443 St. Catherine St. East, corner Berri.

McGill libraries need union

by alan freeman

The CSN as a bargaining agent for McGill library workers? This possibility has become more real as a result of recent unionization on the part of non-professional library workers at Sir George.

The Syndicat National des Employés de l'Université Sir George Williams (CSN) which received accreditation in August, groups about 60 of the 85 workers in a loosely-structured union. Professionals, the degree — holding librarians are not members of the group. The Sir George workers, mostly in their twenties, are aiming for higher wages, better fringe benefits, and payroll check-off for union dues in their negotiations with the administration scheduled to start next month.

But their objectives don't stop there. Paul Davis and Bernd Scheitterlein, spokesmen for the group, talk seriously of gaining a voice in decision — making and planning within the library system. They are also investigating the possibility of setting up a food co-op to serve the members.

One of the reasons behind the Sir George affiliation with the CSN is no doubt the fact that a CSN union has existed for some time at the Université de Montréal. Unlike the one at Sir George, the Syndicat National des Employés de l'Université de Montréal (SNEUM), groups library professionals, cafeteria and residence workers under one umbrella union. The union is divided into two sections: Section Bibliothèque and Section Centre Social.

Library workers joined the union in 1965. At that time, according to Ginette Darbon, current president of SNEUM — Section Bibliothèque, conditions were terrible for everyone.

And indeed they were. Non-professional workers were earning between $34.60 and $66.92 weekly whereas the base wage for librarians was set at $88.84 a week. Fringe benefits were almost non-existent and hiring and firing procedures were arbitrary. There followed a bitterly fought two-month strike in 1966 which resulted in substantial gains for all workers. SNEUM has since signed a second collective agreement. Starting salaries for librarians are now $128 to $141 weekly according to category.

McGill's librarians and non-professionals are not unionized. They have a voluntary association, The McGill University Library Staff Association (MULSA) which last year counted 66 members out of a possible 400. The association has traditionally been oriented towards the professionals in the group but this year's executive of 6 has 2 non-professionals on it including the president, Michael Schreiner.

MULSA does not bargain with administration on salary or other matters. It does serve an intermediary function, however, in some disputes between staff and administration.

There does not appear to be much agitation on the part of members of the library staff at present to unionize. Librarians consider themselves professionals and as such feel trade unions to be alien to their needs and interests. This position may have been once understandable in terms of society's general attitudes towards professionalism but is less so in view of unionization on the part of civil servants, teachers and more recently engineers. Professionals are coming to realize that they receive no special treatment from their employers. If they do not have the means available to demand better wages and working conditions, the employers will not voluntarily make available such improvements. Problems also arise in terms of proper grievance procedures and protection of professional privileges.

A recent case in McGill amply points out these problems. In a memo concerning a vacant position in the Acquisitions Department circulated recently, the library asked for candidates having either a library science degree OR a simple BA or BSc with systems experience. The position had previously been held by degree-holding librarians only. There was no prior consultation with members of MULSA or the library staff in general concerning the reclassification. Librarians are naturally concerned when the possibility arises that their profession may be reclassified out of existence.

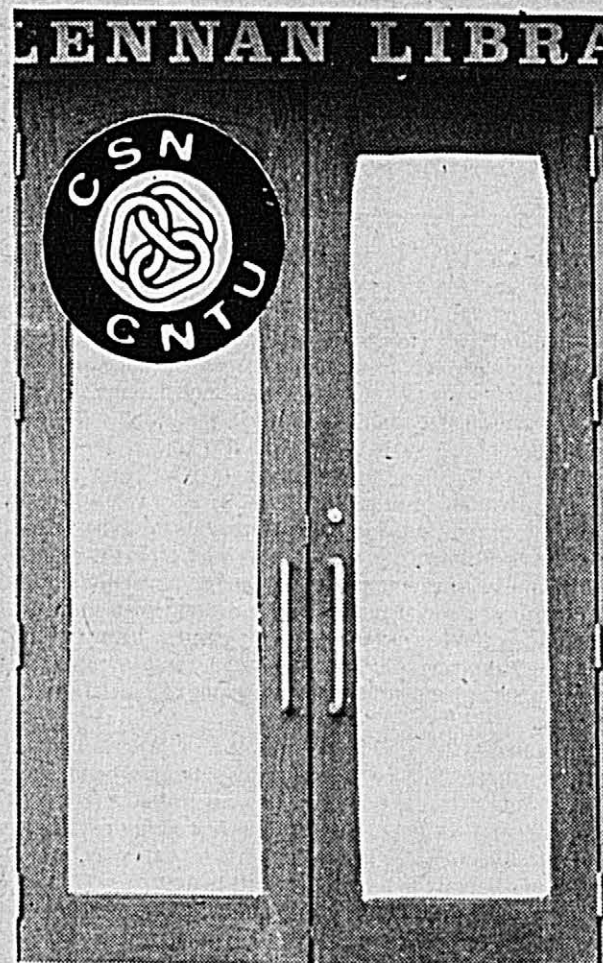

Another problem with voluntary work associations was made abundantly clear in discussion of the above problem at an open meeting held by MULSA, a few weeks ago. In discussion of a proposal to send a letter concerning the matter to Keith Crouch, the over-all director of McGill's libraries, one librarian remarked, "What do we do if we don't receive a reply? We all know that there's a history of Mr. Crouch not answering such letters." There exists no grievance procedure in the McGill library system.

McGill professors are also represented by a nonunion organization. However, the McGill Association of University Teachers is associated with the Canadian Association of University Teachers whose recommendations are respected and whose powers of blacklisting a university are most effective.

It is unlikely that McGill's librarians will form a union until their interests are seriously threatened. There is no doubt that the main reason behind unionization at U de M was the low salary scale. Since that time, the salaries at U de M have been rising quickly. There may come a time in the not too distant future when McGill's librarians find that they've been left behind in the shuffle.

The non-professionals should be more inclined towards unionization. Wages are low. A starting annual salary of $3300 (Library Assistant II) or $3600 (Library Assistant III) is meagre by any standards and certainly nothing to raise a family on. The annual increment of approximately 6% which a library assistant can hope to receive if he stays, barely covers rises in the cost of living.

The salary scale presently in force at McGill was issued in March of 1968. Salaries at U de M will surpass McGill's salaries by June of next year when the final phase of their contract goes into effect.

There are considerable obstacles towards unionization here. Unlike the workers at Sir George or even U de M, workers here are spread among a large number of libraries. It is, as a result, difficult to organize the diverse groups into one. There is also a problem of the large turn-over in non-professional staff, especially in the lower classifications. The salary scale encourages people to move on as soon as they can.

Perhaps the most serious barrier to unionization lies in the present state of the economy. Many workers seem pleased to have any job at all. It's hard to be an agitator when you know there are ten people waiting to get your job if you're suddenly fired.

Traditions die hard at McGill, so don't expect to run into picket lines the next time you go to Redpath. But neither should you discount the possibility of unionization. The need for proper representation of workers exists in all spheres of society. The university, which has long benefited from a low-salaried work force, cannot expect to remain aloof from the process of collective bargaining forever.

Some benefit!

Sir,

In view of the numerous inaccuracies and half truths which Mr. Zisman has alleged in his letter on November 20th, I would like to make a few facts clear.

The concert referred to, was to the best of my knowledge, not sponsored either by the A.S.U.S. or the Folk Music Society. The F.M.S. was not eligible for a budget that year, which made any financial arrangements out of the question, period. Most of the preliminary arrangements were made by an individual who was not a student of this university nor an official member of the F.M.S. The matter was treated, therefore, as we would handle any outside group requesting the use of the University Centre Facilities for a particular benefit. I believe, at the time we stated that as a preliminary requirement to a contract between the Students' Society and the individual organizing the event, a public liability policy be obtained for $500,000., which costs less than $50. I seem to remember that one of the objections raised by the individual concerned was that he would have to sign the contract and indicate responsibility for organization, a necessary requirement for an event of this type. This he was reluctant to do, for reasons which are obvious to anyone who has ever been to a rock concert held in the Union.

In addition to the above, the Students' Society Executive felt that there were some further problems presented by the proposal. According to the "budget" presented, the group who were going to perform would receive most benefit, individuals involved with various security arrangements necessary for an event of this type, next, and what was left over after the amusement tax was deducted would go to Logos. Some benefit!

It is true that the Students' Society discussed the question of a share of the gate. I would submit that this is hardly unusual since we have to pay for the operation and maintenance of the Centre. Mr. Zisman further says, "This dance was planned as a benefit for Logos and other organizations that lacked money." Well, we all lack money as the Students' Society Auditors will attest to. I wasn't aware that organizations other than Logos were involved in this benefit, but, even so, there was some question as to whether the students of this University might consider Logos an organization worthy of their support.

I might also add that "no dance was held" is the understatement of the year. The organizers of this so-called benefit decided a week earlier to call off the event for March 13, 1969, without letting us know, and then, some individuals or individual started to advertise a free concert at the Union over the radio for that particular night. Great joke, eh? Well not for us; for we had to tell all the people who were innocently (?) part of the joke that there was no dance. What happened is recorded in the Minutes of the Students' Council. One $2,000 front window was smashed (the individual was apprehended) and in an ensuing scuffle, the Building Manager, Mr. Costi broke his arm while performing his duty and attempting to stop those wonderful "love-children" screaming obscenities at him and rushing the stairs to "liberate the Union". Concerning "necessary pre-conditions", I do not recall having once seen Mr. Zisman during those preliminary discussions.

Lastly, let's get the following facts straight. The E.U.S. is a regular committee of the Students' Society and frequently holds events for their programmes. They always check with us before holding these events, and, as a part of the Students' Society, are covered under our general liability policy, although they too must conform to the fire and other municipal regulations. (see Building Regulations, Section III)

I would submit that the Westmount Youth Clinic is probably a hell of a lot more worthy of support than Logos. But what infuriates me most of all is the fact that Zisman neglects to point out that the profits of this also went to the Save the Children's Fund, an event which the E.U.S. had been promoting for over a week on campus, simultaneously with other campuses across Canada.

Protection, not repression

Sir,
I am writing in reference to the story printed on page one of Monday's (16/11/70) Daily. If acceptable, I hope that it will not be too late to publish this letter.

I refer to the article, "Trick or treat ends in arrest" by Esmond Choueke. Despite the opinions one may have concerning the invocation of the War Measures Act, I hope that no student at McGill is so biased that he will not recognize the fact that the soldiers are here in Montreal to protect life and property. This is far from being an easy task. None of us having had to stand out in the cold, day in, day out, constantly alert to possible danger, guarding important buildings, can possibly realize fully the tremendous pressure that these men have been under for the past month.

In light of the above, I assert that it takes a pretty small-minded, immature and obtuse individual to heckle these soldiers who are doing their job. Whether one wishes to admit it or not, the men were sent here for our protection, not repression.

I hope that Messrs. Brousseau and Bockus have done some serious introspection and realized the complete irresponsibility and foolishness of their actions.

CNTU: Unemployment insurance inadequate

by arlene zuckernick

The CNTU, in its function as a representative of the Quebec and Maritime working classes, has evaluated the effects of the proposed government White Paper on Unemployment Insurance. (See Royal Commission on Unemployment Insurance). In its analysis, the union approves of the progressive direction the new social security legislation is assuming, but it notes the negative effects and blatant omissions of this and other supporting schemes.

The CSN highlights three fundamental criticisms. Firstly, Unemployment Insurance is "most of all a social security concept, purporting to sustain and provide for a short period of time a minimum income for every worker. In this respect, it should be considered as a segment or an element of the government's social policy." As a consequence there is a distinct difference between Unemployment Insurance and private insurance — a difference which must be recognized in both the implementation and financing of a social security scheme.

Secondly, the CNTU believes that a progressive economic climate is a precondition for unemployment insurance. This dynamic economy "should prevail not only in the different economic regions, but as well in the different industrial sectors." Otherwise, such a scheme may become more of a liability to those it purports to aid.

The third premise on which the CNTU critique of the White Paper lies is that "both seasonal and permanent unemployed (in some Quebec and Maritime regions) are victims of unemployment and are not responsible for it due to their total absence from the economic decision centre." Therefore, the unemployment insurance must be paid for by a tax on rate payers and employers contribution, maintaining the essential social aspect of the insurance.

Full employment essential

In its analysis, the union asserts the value of the government proposal as an improvement over the existing stop-gap legislation — both in the trend to universalization of employment and as "a significant step towards a guaranteed annual wage", which is unequivocally recognized as a primary need of any far reaching program of social reform.

However limitations and omissions in the White Paper are obvious. In these limitations the CNTU includes: "the relative sticking of the proposals to the insurance concept, the regressive rate system for the employees, the inadequate and twisted justification of the federal government's exclusive competence in the matter of unemployment insurance," and the lack of a coherent economic policy. The implication that the federal government realizes full employment as an essential is seriously lacking. On the contrary, the White Paper seems to state that "it still prefers to indemnify the unemployed instead of fighting unemployment in a society well endowed with sufficient resources to provide a job for every one willing to work. It is also ready to assume the cost of extra unemployment insurance benefits when the national unemployment rate exceeds 4 percent or when regional unemployment is over 4% and exceeds the national average by more than 1%."

The CNTU challenges the federal government to develop the potential of a conceivably dynamic economy to its utmost, thus providing universal employment. Unless the new insurance scheme is enacted in the context of an advanced economic policy, it will become another stopgap measure that perpetuates a system of unfair employment.

The federal government has established a rate of 4% unemployment as acceptable. It is on the basis of this rate that additional benefits will be extended to certain underdeveloped regions of the economy, "when the regional unemployment rate is above 4% and exceeds the national rate by over 1%". The CNTU, emphasising the need for universal employment stresses that "one should then recourse to a rate more objective and in better accordance with the real potentialities of the Canadian economy. This rate should be a guarantee of the government's willingness to take the necessary measures to utilize fully all the potential resources of the economy. Actually, the only acceptable criterion would be the one calculated by the Economic Council of Canada — i.e. an average annual unemployment rate of 3%." The federal government must not be permitted to abdicate their responsibilities in this matter and must make "an implicit subscription to employment".

The regional dimension

The White Paper has serious implications in respect to the uneven and unequal regional development of the Canadian economy. "The importance of the sector dimension is related to the establishment of the layoff experience rating as a criterion to determine the employers' contribution rates. This means some workers run a relatively greater risk of being unemployed than others depending on the industry they work in. It is a known fact that some industries like construction and forest are relatively more subject to seasonal unemployment than others." The government responsibility, which should be evident — to find these workers jobs — seems absent in those sectors having a high layoff rate. The regional dimension of the scheme has led the CNTU to question the soundness of the federal analysis and the union can only accept such a position if it advances policy to stabilize, lower and finally eliminate the unemployment in the various sectors and regions.

The CSN has accused the federal authorities of setting forth a defective and ultimately regressive method of levying employers' contributions. In effect employers will be paying .8% of the weekly income up to $150. This trend is unacceptable to the working class, and could simply be rectified by "a progressive tax, plus contributions."

Federal vs. provincial control

It is in the discussion of the constitutional implications of the scheme that the CSN establishes its central premise. Both the federal and provincial governments provide social services. This duplication is wasteful to those who pay for it. The justification of the federal control lies in its own analysis of the "nature and source of the forces which give rise to unemployment, and hence the need for unemployment insurance, and the capacity of the government to deal with these forces." Other factors, by which the Ottawa government attempts to rationalize its desire for control are the dominance of international economic situation and the lack of resources of the provinces to cope with the problem. Reallocation of funds will solve the latter. The union feels that "improvement of the national and international economic outlook will not improve proportionally the employment situation in those regions where labour mobility is low. In other words, those regions facing a case of structural unemployment."

Structural unemployment is essential to the maintenance of the present economic system and is manifested in a number of restrictions on the workers by the existing social and political states. The most blatant example of this is the Quebecois, whose mobility only reaches to the Quebec borders. These problems can be best understood and best coped with at the provincial level, with fiscal control resting with the Quebec government. In simpler terms, the provinces, especially in the case of Quebec, are in a better position vis-a-vis the working class to discover and improve the position of the chronically unemployed. Therefore, the federal government should allow more provincial jurisdiction over fiscal, monetary and tariff policies to operate to the advantage of the people. The CNTU recognizes that the federal authority should combat unemployment but with a much greater degree of coordination with the provinces. Thus, due to the peculiarities of Quebec's labour force, the CNTU believes "all elements of the manpower policies, including the administration of unemployment insurance should be under the province of Quebec."

Conclusions

The CNTU criticism of the specific issues and viewpoints proposed by the Royal Commission does not lessen the value of a critique of the present unemployment insurance program as a whole. The structural changes established in the new plan have important implications for the labor force, although they do not advance far enough. The government has declared that the program has served the Canadian workers well, but its scheme has been too inefficient and conservative and "the popularity of the actual program is mainly due to the high frequency of its utilization by the workers and its loopholes giving way to the exploitation of the possibilities it offers."

The CNTU, in its function as a voice of the Quebec working class takes the position that the Quebec workers can be better served by a dynamic economic policy administered by the representatives of the people concerned.

Gird up thy loins

The Red and White Revue is in desperate need of male actors capable of singing and dancing, to audition for this year's show.

At auditions held earlier this month, 51 women turned out to try for parts. The male turnout however was distressingly low. Unlike the Women's Liberation Movement, the Revue can't work without guys.

The actors are needed to fill several chorus and lead spots. If however, McGill students are not interested, the Revue will have to turn to actors from Sir George Williams University.

Dave Hochoy, director of the Revue, is eager to keep the show a McGill affair. "It's been written and produced here, the songs are beautiful and it's a great chance to do something exciting and creative."

This year's show is based on the 20's and promises to be a lot of fun. If you think you have talent, don't hesitate — COME AUDITION on Thursday Nov. 26 and Dec. 3 in Union B26-27 at 7pm. See you there.

International-Intercollegiate day planned

by Julian Sher

The annual International Festival sponsored by the International Students' Association will not be held this year. In its place will be an International-Intercollegiate Day, with participation from all major Montreal universities.

Alice Adrianov, Public Relations Officer of the ISA, was quite pleased with the response from Loyola, Sir George, U de M, and especially "the extremely good response from Dawson College".

We have no plans as yet to what type of activities we'll hold," Miss Adrianov said "It will be completely different from what we've had before."

A November 25th meeting is slated for the Executives of McGill's many national clubs and any other students interested in planning the activities.

Representatives from the different universities will get together to discuss the program on November 30th, at 4 pm, in Union 237. The meeting is open to the public.

The main concern of the ISA is, of course, finances.

The other universities may share the cost, and the Association plans to approach the Post-Graduate Students' Society for financial aid, but it, alone, will have to supply most of the money. "Our budget has been seriously decreased," the Public Relations Officer complained.

J.V.B-Ball

Bolt Upright?

by Laurie and Issie

"Hey, Laur, do we have to write another f... preview article."
"Don't ask me is, I still haven't found the right gym."

Again, indecision plagued these two reporters as they tried to write a second chapter in the continuing drama of J.V. basketball.

The problem: 1) To go to the gym and watch the J.V.'s scrimmage or 2) watch Ira Turetsky do his imitations of Barry Goldwater (our apologies to Mr. Goldwater) or 3) eat supper at the Union.

After serious deliberation as to which activity would prove the least fatal, we unwittingly fell prey to our stomachs and chose the third option.

The following observations were made when we finally did reach the gym. The Indians, all in all are at long last shaping up into some semblance of a basketball team. Coach Sam Wimsner's stress on conditioning and ball-control is gradually baring its rewards. It was a greatly improved team that greeted us this time out, and left us eagerly anticipating a resounding victory at Bishop University tonight at 6:30 eastern, 5:30 central.

Those who made the final cut are John Dabry, Abe Benaroya, Kevin Walsh, Cliff Bochner, Bolt Upright, Glenn Marshall, Ted Lann, Joel Weinstein, Jack D. Ripper, Mat Zanuck, Saul Markman, John Landouskis and Cecil Sweet.

The Highlight of the practice was a scrimmage with the Senior Varsity team. The display put on by the juniors was encouraging indeed. Using full-court presses and double-teaming, and taking full advantage of quick-breaks and turn-overs, the J.V.s lorded it over their senior counterparts. Needless to say Coach Mooney could not stand for this humiliation and in a desperation move in the dying moments of the game, he pulled his goalie and managed to eke out the loss.

Squaws thrive blessed

by Sandy Baburek

While the Alouettes are well on their way to the Grey Cup, McGill women athletes are making a similar comeback. This past weekend the girls hosted players from Carleton, Ottawa, Western, and Guelph Universities and emerged victorious in Basketball, Badminton, and Ice Hockey.

The Senior Basketballers turned in the most impressive performance as they downed Ottawa University 44-37 in a hard-hitting, closely fought struggle. Inspired by their victory, the Squaws then walked over Carleton 55-13. High scorers for McGill were Barb Carson, who tallied 12 points against Ottawa, and Rae Moore with 12 against Carleton.

An aggressive defence and controlled offence has moved the team into first place in their section of the W.I.T.C.A. League, with a 3-0 win-loss record for the season. Their next encounter is tomorrow night at 8:15 in Currie Gym, where the Squaws will take on the girls from Sir George.

In Badminton, McGill girls lost only two games over the weekend, and managed to win all their matches. First singles Neelanthi Kannangara dropped one to Ottawa's Louise Coulombe, but won two of three to take the round, as did second doubles Nora Brown and Nadia Miloradovitch in their match with Carleton. Second singles Debbie Meredith and first doubles Marg Crombie and Bee Hong Lim never met defeat.

The Pink Pucksters kept their spirit alive by skating to a 4-2 victory over Western and 1-1 tie with Guelph, last year's Intercollegiate Champions. McGill goalie Ricki Zinman came up with some spectacular saves as she warded off Western's 29 shots on goal and Guelph's 21. Top scorer for the Squaws was Anne Smith, who netted the winning and safety goals in the encounter with Western and the sole pointer against Guelph.

In fact, the only disappointment of the weekend came as the Senior Volleyballers were downed in both their matches. Lacking in height on the court, the McGill girls dropped their season-opener to Ottawa 3-1 in a best-of-five round, and were stymied 3-0 by Carleton's serve. However, the girls are working on a new attack, and with a little more aggressive play they should meet with success.

Not to be outshone by the performance of the home teams, the Synchronized Swimmers travelled to Quebec City for the Twin and Ashworth Trophies. The girls, who had attended an Aquatic Arts Symposium at the State University of New York the week before, made a fine showing. Soloist Jean McKellar placed fifth while the duet, performed by Lynn Gibson and Lois Groves placed third.

These three girls alone with Judy Lynam and Maureen Wood placed second in the team routines. After the competition, McGill's Synchronized Team was named as alternates to represent Quebec at the National Winter Games in Saskatchewan next February. If for any reason the Quebec City Y.W.C.A. cannot attend the games, McGill will replace them.

McGill slaughters Mac 12-4

"May she rest in peace..."

Macdonald College died a year early Monday night, as the Redmen, led by Peter Burgess, killed the Clansmen 12-4.

The Redmen, looking more and more like the Big Red Machine, out-hit, and out-skated the Farmers while amassing the incredible total of 70 shots on goal, including at least 10 breakaways.

Special Events

Next Wednesday night will be Engineering Night at the Winter Stadium. All Engineers attending the game against Laval will be eligible for a puck shooting contest between periods — prizes will be given. There is also a rumour unconfirmed at present that free coffee will be given to all Engineers.

Miss Redmen Contest — Nominations are open for Miss Redmen. The winner will be hostess at all McGill Redmen home games. Any group, club, intramural team, fraternity, etc., is eligible to enter a candidate. Entry forms are available at the Daily Office and at the general office in the Currie gym. Nomination papers must have 10 signatures. Nominations close 5pm Monday — judging will be held at 1pm Tuesday in the Student Lounge at the Currie Gym. Miss Redmen will assume her reserved seat next Wednesday night when the Redmen host Laval.

Peter Burgess led the McGill squad with three goals — one a picture play in which he passed to Doug Brown standing at the blueline, cut sharply toward the net to take the return pass and then beat the Mac goalie with a backhand shot that caught the inside of the far post.

On another of his goals, Burgess stole the puck at the blueline, got by a Clansman defence-man, and scored on a good shot away as the Clansmen defence proved to be inept, to say the least. But the Redmen also scored on deflections and on shots from the point — something they haven't been doing so far this season.

Good defence

The defence, which has been the Redmen's weakest point so far, turned in a great game. Aside from playing well in their own zone, they were carrying the puck

Ryan and Barrow continue to lead the Redmen. Kerner is hanging tough in front of the net — both his goals were scored from that vicinity — and is skating well. Ryan is a great scorer and a real hustler.

But perhaps the best sign of the night was the resurgence of Wayne Barrow as a goal scorer. Last year Barrow was the team's leading goal-getter — but until this game he had scored only one Roxburgh and Doug Brown, while Crossley, who has been having a lot of tough luck around the net, shifted to center on a line with Tim Kerrigan and Stu Hamilton. The change seemed to have worked well — Burgess scored three and Crossley one.

2 big games

The Redmen face two really big games this week. If they win both, they could be in first place by the weekend. Tonight they play the Université de Montreal while on Friday they meet the Queens Golden Gaels.

Tonight's game, which starts at 8:30 at the Winter Stadium not only counts as a league game but also counts toward the Coupe de Quebec. More than that, it's a matter of pride. "There's only room for one number one in Montreal", says Gilmour, "and this year it's going to be McGill".

Friday night's game will also be played in the Winter Stadium — game starts at 8 pm.

SLAPSHOTS: Gilmour used the occasion to give everyone plenty of ice time — Art Bloom played in nets during the second and third period. . . Steve Johnson, Michel Potvin, Jack Periotti, and Bob Chartrand played regularly. . . Friday night the first one hundred fans to enter the rink will be given free coffee.

NICE SAVE: Goalie Norm Lord (the one with the mask) had very few opportunities to look good Tuesday night. He was tested with a grand total of 22 shots.

Other goal scorers for the Redmen were Skippy Kerner and Wayne Barrow with two apiece, while singles went to Dave Mutch, John Donnelly, Alex Manson, Garth Ryan and Doug Crossley.

At least half of the Redmen goals were scored on clear break-well. Three of the goal scorers were defencemen.

Alex Manson in particular showed great improvement. On his goal he took the puck almost the length of the ice before breaking in alone to beat the Clansmen netminder.

Offensively, the line of Kerner, for the year. One of his goals was scored on a breakaway while the other was a deflection. According to Coach Gilmour, Barrow must keep scoring — otherwise other teams will key on Ryan and bring that line to a standstill.

There was an important line change last night. Burgess moved to center on the second line, playing along with Dave

Redmen face Bishop's

by Ira Turetsky
Senior Sports reporter

In answer to the multitudes that are, no doubt, beside themselves with anticipation, I would like to make one thing perfectly clear. There will, indeed, be a Redmen Basketball Team this year, and it might be a pretty good team at that.

Practice, practice

For the last four weeks, Coach Tom Mooney has been running his charges through top secret, exhausting practices. Tonight, both the erstwhile coach and his players will get some indication on the worth of what has taken place, and on the team's hopes for the future.

Some time this afternoon, the Redmen, accompanied by the Indians, will board a bus and head down to Lennoxville Quebec where they will encounter the Bishops University Gaitors. The trip to Bishops has long been a source of frustration for McGill teams, and last year's debacle culminated in several players missing the bus home.

All out effort

Coach Mooney does have some very good reasons for believing that tonight's game will be different. "For the first time since I've been here, I've got at least ten real ball-players who will give me an all out effort." It would appear that Mooney is right. While the team does not have an outstanding scorer of the Golomeev-Brodeur class, there are more solid players than ever before.

Among the more notable of these, is Bill Holt, an aggressive 6'2" forward who supplies strength up front and on defense. He will be joined up front by newcomers Bill Swindon and Henri Jansen, 6'2" and 6'7" respectively. In addition, Mooney can call upon a vastly-improved Howard Roseman and long-time Redmen favorite, Steve Fraid. Rounding out the fore-court alignment is Kit Kenard, a 6'10" giant who played for last year's Indians.

At the guard position, there are three veterans and two newcomers. Chad Gaffield, the second leading scorer on last year's team, Mike Reid and Neill Iscoe are all back. Jerry St Pierre and Art Sandman will both provide excellent speed, and Sandman has displayed an excellent shooting touch.

No predictions

Tonight's game will be the first chance to validly assess the Redmen. It will be their first encounter with any opposition, so no predictions can be made. There does seem to be a good array of talent, but Bishops has always given the Redmen trouble, and the Gaitors will be bolstered by the return of all-star Pete Munzar.

The season opener is a Coupe de Québec encounter, and it is important in many respects. The OQAA schedule opens on Friday, when the Redmen host the defending Champion Queen's Golden Gaels in an immensely important game.

Strength Up Front: Members of the Redmen basketball team are up for tonight's game due to the acquisition of Christine "Jo-Jo" Jorgensen to the squad. "Jo-Jo" is reputed to be "fast under the boards."
